Hongwei Zhu

Law Clerk

Hongwei currently supports U.S. immigration law matters, primarily assisting immigration attorneys with a range of employer-sponsored and professional talent immigration cases. Her work includes preparing case materials, organizing supporting evidence, verifying information, and tracking case progress. Throughout the process, she focuses on maintaining logical consistency among the factual narrative, legal basis, and supporting documentation to ensure petitions are complete and compliant.

Previously, Hongwei built solid practical experience in civil and commercial litigation and corporate legal affairs. She has worked on various contract disputes and corporate litigation matters and is familiar with legal drafting, evidence management, and case process control. This background enables her to support immigration matters from the perspective of employment compliance and risk management—helping organize employer profiles, job information, and related supporting documents to provide steady compliance support for immigration filings.

In addition, Hongwei has strong legal research and analytical skills. As a first author, she participated in multiple research projects related to China's Civil Code, which contributed to her rigorous and detail-oriented working style. She excels at integrating statutory interpretation, fact development, and practical execution, providing reliable and professional support to attorneys and clients in immigration matters.
