Wenqi Zhou, Esq.

Associate

Wenqi combines her expertise in employment-based immigration law with extensive corporate and litigation experience to guide global clients through complex USCIS processes with precision and strategic business insight.

Her practice focuses on non-immigrant employment-based petitions, including H-1B, L-1, and TN visas, where she guides employers and professionals through every stage of the USCIS process with precision and regulatory compliance. Her work encompasses compiling comprehensive supporting evidence, preparing detailed petition letters, and ensuring strict adherence to USCIS policy memoranda and the Immigration and Nationality Act.

Prior to joining ILS, Wenqi practiced at a top-tier international law firm, where she worked on high-profile IPO projects conducting legal due diligence, drafting legal opinions, and reviewing complex transactional documents. She also gained valuable litigation experience in China, representing clients in civil and commercial disputes involving independent guarantees, trade secrets, and contract enforcement matters.

This diverse legal background—spanning corporate transactions, litigation, and immigration law—enables Wenqi to provide comprehensive, business-focused immigration solutions tailored to meet the unique needs of her international clientele.
